"Every tribe of Jakuti is divided into several nasèlji, each of which is under a knäsez or chief, by whom minor disputes, &c., are settled. More serious cases go before the golowa or superintendent of the whole tribe, who is elected from among the knäsez. The people often call in a schaman or conjuror, and have recourse to his incantations to recover a strayed cow, to cure a sick person, or to obtain good weather for a journey, &c., &c. "
